2.0 OVERVIEW OF OUR FUND AND BUSINESS

The following section is qualified in its entirety by reference to the more detailed information included elsewhere in this Information Memorandum. This section should be read as an introduction to the full text of this Information Memorandum and any decision to invest in the Fund should be based on consideration of the contents of this Information Memorandum as a whole.

The attention of Sophisticated Investors is drawn to the risk factors as set out in Section 4 of this Information Memorandum.

2.1 Background information of our Fund

Our Fund was incorporated in Malaysia on the 04 October, 2023 under the Limited Liability Partnership Act 2012 as a limited liability partnership. The principal activity of our Fund is investment holding.

The Fund's primary objective is to achieve capital appreciation and stable yield generation for Unit Holders by investing across different stages of company growth and diversified financial instruments. The Fund seeks to capture opportunities in dynamic, high-potential businesses and income-generating assets to deliver balanced returns. Target investments include, but are not limited to:

- Start-Up Companies: Providing early-stage capital to innovative ventures with scalable business models and strong growth prospects.
- High Growth Companies: Investing in enterprises with proven market demand and rapid revenue expansion to support accelerated growth and market penetration.
- Pre-IPO Companies: Financing late-stage companies preparing for listing, enabling them to strengthen governance, enhance valuations, and scale operations ahead of going public.
- IPOs: Participating in quality IPOs to capture early-stage public market value creation and potential listing premiums.
- Listed Companies: Allocating capital to publicly traded businesses with robust fundamentals, attractive valuations, or turnaround potential, offering liquidity and steady performance.
- Funds: Investing selectively in specialist funds, including private equity, venture capital, or sector-focused vehicles, to broaden diversification and access niche opportunities.
- High-Yielding Financial Instruments: Deploying CAPnto bonds, structured notes, and other yield-focused securities to generate stable income and mitigate overall portfolio risk.
- Government and GLC Project Financing: Providing capital for government-backed or GLC-led infrastructure, energy, transportation, and strategic development projects, benefiting from strong credit profiles, long-term visibility, and stable, risk-adjusted returns.

Where appropriate, and subject to the discretion of the General Partner and the Investment Manager, the Fund may also invest in:

- Equities and equity-related securities listed on Bursa Malaysia or other recognised stock exchanges; and
- Unlisted companies with a compelling value proposition, particularly those aligned with the Fund's strategy.

The Fund aims to achieve an average target return of 18% per annum on selected investments. This is supported by the Investment Manager's expertise in corporate finance, operational scaling, and strategic value creation, ensuring that portfolio companies are well-positioned for long-term success. This average target return is stated before the deduction of the Fund's operating expenses.

By pooling capital from Sophisticated Investors, the Fund provides access to exclusive private equity opportunities in established enterprises. This approach delivers diversification, mitigates downside risk, and offers the potential for both stable income and capital growth.

2.2 Optimization & Monetization Strategy

The Fund is committed to maximising portfolio performance through proactive operational optimization and strategic monetization planning from the outset of each investment. Portfolio companies must meet operational, financial, and governance standards to scale efficiently, enhance value, and increase monetization potential.

Monetization Approach

The Fund will pursue both traditional and alternative exit strategies to provide liquidity and maximise investors' internal rate of return ("IRR"). These may include mergers, trade sales, buyouts, strategic acquisitions, private secondary offerings, IPOs, or structured dividend plays. An operational monetization team will identify potential acquirers early in the investment cycle, cultivate relationships, and maintain strategic engagement to position the portfolio for an optimal exit event.

Proactive Exit Farming

From the initial investment stage, potential acquirers will be identified and engaged to establish relationships and communicate the Fund's long-term objectives. Progress updates will be selectively shared to generate interest and position the investment for a strategic exit.

Term-Limit Monetization Options

Where a portfolio company approaches the end of the Fund's term without a viable exit or sufficient dividend yield, the Fund may pursue alternative monetization measures. These include discounted disposals, drag-along and tag-along rights, redemptions, or strategic mergers, even if such actions require partial capital write-downs, to safeguard overall portfolio returns.

Our strategies are designed to ensure that portfolio assets:

- Deliver attractive medium-and long-term growth;
- Maintain broad market and sector coverage across the target region;
- Optimise value creation through disciplined asset management; and
- Achieve an exit within two (2) to three (3) years from full investment, where feasible.

The General Partner and Investment Manager, through board representation, will actively guide portfolio companies, ensuring adherence to business plans and exit strategies. Capital will generally be deployed within twelve (12) months of commitment, with a targeted full exit by year three (3) following deployment.

2.3 Investment Methodology

The Fund targets investment horizons of two (2) to three (3) years for individual assets, with initial realisation potentially occurring from year two (2) onwards. The majority of investments are expected to achieve an exit by year three (3), although select assets may be held longer to optimise returns.

Investments will generally be structured with drag-along rights to allow the Investment Manager to enforce an exit following the minimum holding period. Where appropriate, leverage may be utilised to enhance returns, with gearing in portfolio companies typically capped at seventy percent (70%).

Proceeds from asset disposals will be distributed to investors promptly upon receipt. However, subject to the Investment Manager's discretion and in alignment with the Fund's strategy and term, proceeds may be redeployed into new opportunities within the remaining life of the Fund to compound investor returns.

2.4 Investment Criteria

The Fund's mandate is to target assets with compelling value creation potential, robust market positioning, and clear pathways to liquidity events. Priority will be given to opportunities that exhibit resilient fundamentals, sustainable competitive advantages, and sectoral tailwinds.

Typical investment characteristics include:

- High Growth Potential: Businesses or assets capable of delivering above-market returns within a medium- to long-term horizon, typically three (3) to ten (10) years;
- Value Creation Levers: Opportunities for operational optimisation, market expansion, or strategic repositioning;
- Exit Visibility: Identifiable monetization routes, including trade sales, IPOs, or strategic partnerships;
- Risk-Adjusted Returns: Structures that balance growth potential with investor protection through preferential returns, priority dividends, liquidation preferences, or enhanced exit participation rights.

The Fund will remain sector-agnostic but will prioritise investments in sectors aligned with its strategic thesis and network advantages, ensuring diversification and scalability.

2.5 Exit Strategy

Our General Partner and Investment Manager will evaluate potential divestment options for individual investments upon achieving the targeted investment returns, while also assessing IPO prospects for the Fund's portfolio assets, taking into account prevailing market conditions at the relevant time.

To enhance exit flexibility, investments will typically be structured with drag-along rights, allowing the Investment Manager to compel an exit after an initial investment holding period, ensuring alignment with the Fund's overall strategy and protecting the collective interests of all Unit Holders.

The Fund may also execute its investments through direct equity financing or a combination of equity and debt financing (leverage) to optimize capital efficiency and achieve higher yield potential. This flexible approach allows the Fund to tailor its capital structure to suit the specific needs of each investment opportunity.

Exit routes may include trade sales, redemptions, IPOs, or other strategic divestment strategies, depending on market conditions and investor demand. Leveraging its considerable experience in a wide range of exit structures, our General Partner and Investment Manager's team, together with their extensive network of contacts at investment banks, brokerage firms, and other financial institutions, will provide the necessary advice, structuring guidance, and transactional support to maximize value and optimize exit outcomes.

3.0 Market Outlook and Investment Opportunities

The Malaysian economy recorded strong growth of 5.2% in the third quarter of 2025

The Malaysian economy expanded by 5.2% in the third quarter of 2025 (2Q 2025: 4.4%), driven by sustained domestic demand and higher net exports. Household spending was supported by positive labour market conditions, income-related policy measures, and cash assistance programmes. Investment activity was underpinned by continued capital expansion by both private and public sectors. On the external front, net exports registered higher growth as export growth outpaced import growth.

On the supply side, growth was led by the services and manufacturing sectors. Growth in the services sector was mainly contributed by consumer-related sub-sectors, while the manufacturing sector's performance was driven by stronger production in electrical and electronics ("E&E") and consumer-related goods. Meanwhile, the mining and quarrying sector rebounded, reflecting a recovery in crude oil and natural gas production post-scheduled maintenance work. On a quarter-on-quarter, seasonally-adjusted basis, growth expanded by 2.4% (2Q 2025: 2.2%).

Headline inflation remained stable during the quarter while core inflation edged higher

Headline inflation remained stable at 1.3%, while core inflation increased to 2% (2Q 2025: 1.3% and 1.8%, respectively). While the higher core inflation added impetus to headline inflation during the quarter, this was offset by declines in selected administered prices. In particular, electricity (-4.6%; 2Q 2025: 0%) and diesel (-5%; 2Q 2025: 8%) prices were lower during the quarter, in line with the recent electricity tariff restructuring and moderate global cost conditions. Inflation pervasiveness, measured by the share of CPI items registering monthly price increases, edged higher to 43.8% during the quarter (2Q 2025: 41.8%), while remaining below the historical average of 44.5%.

The ringgit appreciated against currencies of most trading partners in the third quarter of 2025

In the third quarter of 2025, the ringgit's nominal effective exchange rate (NEER) appreciated by 0.8% (YTD as of 12 November 2025: 5.3%) against the currencies of Malaysia's major trading partners. The ringgit also remained broadly stable against the US dollar, with a marginal appreciation of 0.05% (YTD as of 12 November 2025: 8.2%). This movement was driven by both external and domestic factors. On the external front, the US Federal Reserve's easing of monetary policy in September coupled with expectations of further rate cuts amid growing concerns about the US economy's outlook, has supported the ringgit during the quarter. In addition, the announcement of trade agreements between the US and several of its trading partners, including Malaysia, has helped ease tariff-related uncertainties and improve sentiment, further supporting the ringgit's performance.

Domestically, Malaysia's positive economic growth prospects, supported by the Government's commitment to domestic structural reforms and fiscal sustainability, will continue to provide support to the ringgit. Bank Negara Malaysia ("BNM") remains committed to ensuring the orderly functioning of the domestic foreign exchange market.

Credit growth increased amid higher growth in outstanding corporate bonds and business loans

Credit to the private non-financial sector grew by 5.9% in the third quarter of 2025 (2Q 2025: 5.2%). Outstanding corporate bonds expanded by 7.3% (2Q 2025: 4.3%) while growth in outstanding loans was sustained at 5.6% (2Q 2025: 5.5%). Business loans grew by 5.4% (2Q 2025: 4.5%) following higher growth in investment-related loans, particularly among non-Small and Medium-sized Enterprises ("SMEs"). SME loan growth also increased slightly, supported by growth in working capital loans amid sustained level of applications for this purpose. Meanwhile, household loan growth moderated slightly to 5.7% (2Q 2025: 6%) following slower growth for personal use loans. Notwithstanding, household loan demand remained broadly steady across most purposes and was met by sustained approvals.

Resilient domestic demand will support growth going forward

Despite the challenging external environment, Malaysia's economic outlook remains on track to achieve growth between 4% and 4.8% in 2025, supported by resilient domestic demand. Household spending will be supported by continued employment and wage growth, as well as income-related policy measures. Investment activity will be sustained by progress of infrastructure projects, further realisation of approved private investments, and the implementation of national master plans. On the external front, export growth is expected to be impacted by tariffs and more moderate external demand. However, growth would be supported by continued demand for E&E goods, inbound tourism and the recovery in mining-related exports.

Headline inflation is expected to remain moderate in 2025 and 2026

Both headline and core inflation are expected to remain moderate for the remainder of the year, supported by steady domestic demand and continued easing in global cost conditions. These factors, together with Government measures to cushion the impact of domestic policy reforms on households, will help sustain a low and stable inflation environment. Heading into 2026, inflation is expected to remain moderate amid steady domestic demand, stable labour market conditions, and favourable supply conditions.

3.1 Overview of Investment Sectors in Malaysia, 2025

Malaysia's investment environment in 2025 reflects a period of structural strengthening and diversification, supported by macroeconomic stability, a mature regulatory framework and sustained domestic demand. Having progressed beyond the post-pandemic recovery phase, Malaysia continues to offer a broad spectrum of investable opportunities across private and public markets, positioning itself as a resilient and competitive investment destination within Southeast Asia.

The Malaysian capital ecosystem spans the full investment lifecycle, including start-up ventures, high-growth companies, pre-IPO investments, IPOs, listed companies, pooled funds, high-yield financial instruments, and government or GLC project financing. This breadth enables investors to gain exposure to innovation-driven growth while also accessing income-oriented and capital-preservation assets within a single jurisdiction.

Investment Approval and Capital Formation

Malaysia continued to attract strong investment interest in 2025. According to the Malaysian Investment Development Authority ("MIDA"), approved investments for the first nine months of 2025 amounted to RM285.2 billion, representing a 13.2% increase year on year. Services sector led the investment breakdown at approximately RM160 billion, followed by manufacturing sector at approximately RM118 billion and the primary sector at approximately RM7 billion. These investments are expected to generate more than 150,000 new employment opportunities nationwide. Domestic investors accounted for over half of total approved investments, reflecting strong local business confidence, while foreign investments continued to play a significant role in high-value manufacturing and services activities.

3.2 Start-up Investment

Start-up investment constitutes a foundational component of Malaysia's broader innovation, entrepreneurship and capital market ecosystem. This segment primarily encompasses early-stage companies at the seed, pre-Series A, Series A and early Series B stages, where enterprises are focused on validating business models, achieving product-market fit, and establishing scalable operational capabilities.

Investments at this stage are typically characterised by higher growth potential alongside elevated execution and business risks. As such, capital providers often play an active role beyond funding, contributing to governance discipline, strategic direction, talent development and access to industry networks. In Malaysia, start-up investment increasingly forms the upstream pipeline for future high-growth companies, pre-IPO candidates and eventual public listings.

Development of Malaysia's Start-up Ecosystem

Malaysia's start-up ecosystem has expanded steadily over the past decade, supported by coordinated policy initiatives, public-private collaboration and growing institutional participation. By 2025, Malaysia hosts several thousand active start-ups, spanning digital services, financial technology, healthcare, sustainability solutions and advanced manufacturing.

According to ecosystem mapping and programme data compiled by Malaysia Digital Economy Corporation (“MDEC”) and agencies under the Ministry of Science, Technology and Innovation (“MOSTI”), a growing proportion of these start-ups have progressed beyond ideation stages into revenue-generating or commercially piloted businesses.

Malaysia’s start-up ecosystem benefits from comparatively lower operating costs, an educated workforce, and strong regional connectivity within Association of Southeast Asian Nations (“ASEAN”), allowing start-ups to scale beyond domestic markets at relatively early stages of development.

Policy and Regulatory Support

Malaysia’s policy and regulatory framework for start-up development have progressively evolved to balance innovation enablement with investor protection and market discipline. This evolution reflects a deliberate shift from purely grant-driven entrepreneurship towards a more structured, market-oriented ecosystem that supports sustainable company formation and capital deployment.

A central pillar of this framework is MYStartup, a national platform coordinated by MOSTI and implemented through agencies such as Cradle Fund. MYStartup serves as an ecosystem integrator, focusing on founder capability development, access to early-stage funding, and connections to domestic and regional markets. Through structured programmes, accelerators and funding facilitation, MYStartup aims to improve start-up survival rates and readiness for private capital participation.

In parallel, MDEC administered programmes support digital adoption, technology commercialisation and ecosystem connectivity across key sectors. MDEC initiatives focus on scaling digital and technology-based start-ups by facilitating market access, enterprise partnerships and international exposure. These programmes are aligned with national digitalisation objectives and encourage start-ups to operate within defined compliance, reporting and data governance standards.

Malaysia has also implemented tax incentives for venture capital and private equity funds, including preferential tax treatment for qualifying investments into local start-ups, as announced periodically by the Ministry of Finance (“MOF”). These incentives are designed to encourage professional fund managers to domicile and deploy CAPn Malaysia, thereby deepening the pool of institutional funding available to start-ups.

In addition, streamlined company incorporation processes and strengthened intellectual property (“IP”) protection frameworks have reduced administrative friction for start-up formation and growth. Digitalised incorporation systems shorten time to market, while clearer IP registration and enforcement mechanisms improve asset protection for innovation-driven businesses.

Collectively, these policy and regulatory measures have contributed to higher transparency, improved governance standards and greater regulatory clarity within Malaysia’s start-up ecosystem. While start-up investment inherently carries higher risk, the presence of structured national programmes, clearer regulatory pathways and institutional oversight aligns Malaysia’s start-up environment more closely with international investor expectations.

Sector Spotlight

(a) Financial Technology (“Fintech”)

Fintech remains one of the most active start-up segments in Malaysia, encompassing digital payments, SME financing platforms, embedded finance solutions and financial infrastructure services. Growth is supported by a large SME base, increasing digital adoption and a regulatory environment that encourages innovation while maintaining financial stability.

(b) Artificial Intelligence (“AI”), Data and Enterprise Software

AI and data driven start-ups have gained increasing relevance as Malaysian corporates prioritize productivity, automation and data-enabled decision-making. These start-ups focus on practical enterprise applications rather than consumer-led experimentation.

(c) Sustainability & Green Technology

Sustainability-focused start-ups have emerged as a structurally important segment in Malaysia, supported by corporate Environmental, Social and Governance (“ESG”) commitments and national energy transition priorities. Start-ups in this sector typically focus on energy efficiency monitoring and optimization, carbon accounting, ESG data and reporting platforms, and renewable energy enablement including rooftop solar and energy management services

(d) Healthcare, Digital Health and Medtech

Healthcare-related start-ups continue to expand in response to demographic shifts, rising healthcare expenditure and capacity constraints within traditional healthcare delivery systems. Start-ups in this segment typically collaborate with healthcare providers, insurers and employers, and operate under heightened regulatory and data protection requirements. Compliance capability and clinical validation are key differentiators in this sector.

(e) Advanced Manufacturing & Deep Tech

Advanced manufacturing and deep-technology start-ups leverage Malaysia’s established industrial base, particularly in electronics, semiconductors and precision engineering. Manufacturing contributes over 20% of Malaysia’s Gross Domestic Product (GDP), and the continued strength of the electrical and electronics sector provides downstream opportunities for technology-enabled industrial start-ups. These ventures typically have longer development cycles but benefit from higher barriers to entry and defensible intellectual property.

3.3 High-Growth Company Investment

High-growth companies represent enterprises that have progressed beyond early-stage development and demonstrated scalable business models, recurring revenue streams and expanding market presence. These companies typically operate with established products or services, growing customer bases and increasing operational complexity, while still maintaining above-average growth potential.

Investments in high-growth companies offer exposure to accelerated expansion with comparatively lower execution risk than start-up investments, as these companies generally possess operating track records, clearer cash flow visibility and more formalised governance structures. In Malaysia, high-growth companies form a critical bridge between start-up ventures and pre-IPO or listed-stage enterprises.

Policy Framework Supporting High-Growth Companies

Government policy continues to play a catalytic role in shaping Malaysia’s high-growth company landscape. The Malaysia Venture Capital Roadmap 2024–2030 outlines a coordinated national strategy to deepen the venture and growth capital market, improve scale-up readiness, and enhance collaboration between public and private capital providers. The roadmap explicitly focuses on strengthening later-stage funding pathways, governance standards, and exit readiness key enablers for high-growth companies.

In parallel, the 13th Malaysia Plan places strong emphasis on the development of High-Growth, High-Value (HGHV) industries, positioning private investment as a central driver of economic transformation. This policy direction is reinforced by the New Industrial Master Plan (NIMP) 2030, which prioritises advanced manufacturing, digitalisation, clean energy, and high-value services through fiscal incentives, infrastructure investment, and ecosystem support.

Together, these frameworks provide a structured policy backdrop that reduces scaling friction and enhances long-term visibility for growth-stage companies and their investors.

Sector Spotlight

(a) Logistics & E-commerce Solutions

High-growth logistics and supply-chain companies have emerged as key beneficiaries of regional trade growth, cross-border e-commerce expansion, and supply-chain realignment. Technology-enabled platforms offering warehousing automation, fulfilment services, last-mile delivery, and cross-border logistics integration are among the most active capital seekers. These businesses benefit from structural demand growth, operating leverage, and long-term customer relationships tied to trade and consumption trends.

(b) Digital Infrastructure and Enterprise Services

Digital infrastructure and enterprise technology companies spanning cloud services, data analytics, cybersecurity, and enterprise software continue to scale under national digitalisation initiatives. Malaysia's positioning as a regional data-centre hub, reinforced by large multinational investments in cloud and AI infrastructure, has created significant downstream demand for specialised service providers with recurring revenue models and high technical barriers to entry.

(c) Renewable Energy and Energy Transition

Renewable energy developers and energy-transition solution providers are scaling rapidly in response to Malaysia's National Energy Transition Roadmap ("NETR") and decarbonisation commitments. Growth-stage companies in this segment typically require expansion capital to fund capacity build-up, project pipelines, and balance sheet strengthening, while benefiting from long-term power purchase agreements, policy support, and increasing corporate demand for green solutions.

(d) Healthcare & Medical Technology

Healthcare providers and medical technology companies are experiencing sustained growth driven by demographic shifts, rising healthcare expenditure, and increasing regional demand for affordable and high-quality medical services. High-growth players in this sector often combine domestic scale with export or regional expansion potential, offering investors exposure to defensive, long-term demand fundamentals.

3.4 Pre-IPO & IPO Investment

Pre-IPO investment targets enterprises that have achieved significant scale and are positioned for transition into the public capital markets. At this stage, companies typically require additional funding to optimise their balance sheets, expand operational capacity, and enhance earnings performance in order to secure more favourable valuations upon listing. Beyond the provision of capital, Pre-IPO investment also facilitates the institutional strengthening of portfolio companies through the enhancement of corporate governance frameworks, the implementation of robust financial and sustainability reporting systems, and the alignment of management practices with public-market standards. Collectively, these measures prepare businesses for the regulatory, operational, and investor-relations requirements of a public listing, while instilling confidence among institutional stakeholders.

IPO investment, by contrast, provides direct exposure to companies at the point of listing, allowing investors to participate in valuation uplift as enterprises enter the public markets. For investors, IPO allocations offer access to high-growth companies often priced at attractive entry points, with liquidity and transparency benefits that private markets cannot provide.

Together, Pre-IPO and IPO investments form a complementary strategy. The former accelerates growth and ensures listing readiness, while the latter captures value at the transition into the public capital markets.

The Opportunity in Malaysia's IPO Market

Malaysia's capital markets are undergoing a resurgence, positioning the country as one of ASEAN's most dynamic listing destinations in 2025. In the first half of the year, Bursa Malaysia recorded 32 IPOs, representing a 48% increase compared to the same period in 2024. Aggregate proceeds more than doubled, with total IPO market capitalisation reaching US$4.0 billion. This performance sets Malaysia apart as the only ASEAN market registering growth in both IPO volume and proceeds.

Looking ahead, Bursa Malaysia has set a target of approximately 60 IPOs in 2025, highlighting confidence in the pipeline of companies preparing for public listing. High-profile offerings, such as MMC Port Holdings' planned RM6 billion IPO, have already attracted cornerstone interest from global institutional investors. This signal deepening international confidence in Malaysia's equity markets and provides a positive benchmark for other issuers preparing to follow.

A Supportive Macroeconomic Backdrop

Malaysia's macroeconomic conditions remain highly supportive for capital formation. With accommodative monetary policy following Bank Negara Malaysia's reduction of the Overnight Policy Rate (OPR), and inflation stabilised at multi-year lows, the operating environment is both predictable and cost-efficient for businesses. For late-stage companies preparing for a listing, these dynamics translate into greater certainty on funding costs, enhanced consumer demand stability, and a favourable window to position for valuation uplift.

Evolving Regulatory and Governance Framework

Malaysia's regulatory architecture has undergone significant modernisation in recent years, with reforms specifically designed to raise listing quality, enhance investor confidence, and align local issuers with global best practices. These developments are highly relevant for Pre-IPO candidates, as they directly shape valuation potential and public market readiness.

One of the most significant enhancements is the accelerated transfer framework introduced in January 2024, which enables eligible companies listed on the ACE Market to migrate more efficiently to the Main Market. This reform addresses a longstanding gap by providing a transparent and time-bound pathway for high-growth mid-cap companies to graduate into the Main Market. The streamlined process not only reduces regulatory uncertainty but also gives investors greater visibility on exit timelines, thereby enhancing the attractiveness of ACE-listed issuers as Pre-IPO opportunities.

Equally transformative is the introduction of the National Sustainability Reporting Framework ("NSRF"), which aligns corporate sustainability reporting with IFRS Sustainability Disclosure Standards (IFRS S1 and IFRS S2). This framework requires listed companies and by extension, Pre-IPO candidates preparing to list to develop consistent, comparable, and credible sustainability disclosures that meet international expectations, thereby widening the investable universe for ESG-focused institutional investors.

Another important development is the LEAP-to-ACE Market transfer framework, which strengthens Malaysia's tiered market structure by allowing companies to build operational track records in LEAP before moving to ACE and ultimately to the Main Market. This staged progression enhances investor confidence that issuers have met increasingly rigorous operational, governance, and disclosure thresholds prior to public market transition.

Sector Spotlight

(a) Technology & Digital Platforms

High-growth digital companies in fintech, cloud services, and e-commerce are scaling rapidly under Malaysia Digital (MD) initiatives. Pre-IPO funding accelerates expansion and prepares them to meet international governance and reporting standards.

(b) Healthcare & Life Sciences

Healthcare services, pharmaceuticals, and medtech firms are expanding capacity to meet rising domestic demand and regional opportunities. Pre-IPO financing supports growth while aligning with stringent public-market governance expectations.

(c) Consumer & Retail

Companies with strong brand equity in food & beverage, retail, and lifestyle sectors are expanding regionally. Pre-IPO capital enables product diversification, digital adoption, and consumer engagement strategies to secure premium valuations.

(d) Infrastructure & Logistics

Port, transport, and logistics providers are scaling in line with Malaysia's role as a regional trade hub. Pre-IPO funding strengthens their operational and ESG credentials to meet institutional investor standards.

(e) Renewable Energy & Green Industries

Driven by the NETR, renewable energy developers and sustainable manufacturers are preparing listings to access growth capital. Pre-IPO investors benefit from structural ESG-driven valuation uplifts.

3.5 Listed Company Investment

Investments in publicly listed companies constitute a core component of Malaysia's capital markets, providing investors with liquidity, transparency, and access to established businesses operating across key sectors of the economy. For investment strategies seeking a balance between capital preservation, income generation, and measured growth, listed equities offer exposure to corporates with demonstrated operating track records and adherence to regulatory and governance standards.

Opportunity in Malaysia's Listed Market

Malaysia's public equity market is characterised by its breadth and institutional maturity. As at late 2025, Bursa Malaysia comprises in excess of 1,000 listed issuers across the Main, ACE, and LEAP markets, representing a wide range of industries including financial services, consumer sectors, industrials, telecommunications, utilities, healthcare, and technology. This diversity enables investors to construct portfolios with broad economic exposure while maintaining sectoral selectivity.

Ongoing listing activity continues to replenish the public market pipeline, with approximately 60 new listings recorded during 2025, supporting capital formation and maintaining market relevance for both issuers and investors.

Regulatory and Governance Enhancements

Malaysia's listed market operates within a comprehensive regulatory framework administered by Bursa Malaysia and the Securities Commission Malaysia. Listed issuers are subject to rigorous disclosure, compliance, and continuing listing obligations, supporting market integrity and investor confidence.

Sector Spotlight

(a) Banking and Financial Services

The banking and financial services sector represents a significant proportion of Malaysia's listed market capitalisation. Leading domestic banking institutions continue to exhibit stable earnings profiles, prudent capital adequacy, and consistent dividend policies, providing defensive characteristics and income visibility for investors.

(b) Utilities and Infrastructure

Listed utilities and infrastructure operators benefit from regulated revenue structures and long-duration demand profiles. Continued investment in grid enhancement and infrastructure development positions these companies to capture incremental demand associated with industrial growth, digital infrastructure, and energy transition initiatives, while maintaining predictable cash flow generation.

(c) Renewable Energy and Technology

Listed renewable energy and technology-related companies are positioned to benefit from Malaysia's ongoing digitalisation and sustainability agenda. Renewable energy operators continue to expand installed capacity in line with national transition objectives, while technology-oriented issuers supporting cloud services, digital platforms, and enterprise solutions benefit from sustained structural demand across both public and private sectors.

3.6 Fund Investment

Fund-based investments provide investors with diversified access to Malaysia's private market growth landscape through professionally managed venture capital (“VC”) and private equity (“PE”) vehicles. By investing through funds, investors mitigate single-asset concentration risk while benefiting from the sourcing capability, execution expertise, governance oversight, and exit discipline of experienced fund managers.

VC and PE funds play a critical role in Malaysia's capital formation ecosystem by identifying scalable businesses, supporting operational expansion, and facilitating exits through trade sales, secondary transactions, or public listings. For investors, fund investments offer exposure to a broader opportunity set across sectors, stages, and deal structures than direct investments alone.

Opportunity in Malaysia's Fund Ecosystem

As at end-2024, Malaysia's PE and VC industry recorded total committed funds of approximately RM24.7 billion, according to the Securities Commission Malaysia. This reflects a steady expansion of private market capital and signals continued investor confidence in Malaysia's fund management landscape. The ecosystem is supported by a broad base of participants, with more than 130 registered private equity and venture capital management corporations operating in the country, ranging from early-stage venture funds to growth and buyout-focused private equity managers.

Fund investments offer investors a practical advantage by spreading capital across multiple portfolio companies rather than relying on the performance of a single business. A typical Malaysian venture capital or private equity fund may invest in 10 to 20 companies, often across sectors such as technology, healthcare, consumer services, logistics, manufacturing, and energy-related industries. This portfolio-based approach reduces concentration risk while allowing investors to benefit from the upside of successful companies within the fund.

Malaysia has also positioned itself as a regional base for fund management activities, with many locally managed funds deploying capital not only domestically but also into neighbouring ASEAN markets such as Indonesia, Vietnam, and Thailand. This regional orientation enables investors to gain broader geographic exposure while benefiting from Malaysia's relatively stable legal system, experienced financial professionals, and strong regulatory oversight. The availability of fund administrators, auditors, legal advisors, and Shariah advisers further enhances Malaysia's attractiveness as a fund domicile.

A notable feature of Malaysia's fund ecosystem is its strength in Shariah-compliant investment strategies. Islamic venture capital and private equity funds are active across sectors including halal consumer products, healthcare services, logistics, and asset-backed businesses. These funds attract capital from both domestic institutions and international investors, particularly from the Middle East, and benefit from Malaysia's long-standing leadership in Islamic finance and capital markets.

3.7 High-yielding Financial Instruments

High-yielding financial instruments in Malaysia form an important component of the country's capital markets, offering investors access to predictable income streams, diversified credit exposure, and relatively lower volatility compared to equity investments. These instruments primarily comprise government securities, corporate bonds, and sukuk, spanning a wide range of maturities, credit ratings, and yield profiles.

Market Overview

Malaysia has one of the most developed fixed-income markets in ASEAN. As of 2025, the total outstanding bond and sukuk market is valued at approximately RM2.2 trillion, reflecting strong participation from government bodies, corporations, and institutional investors. Government securities provide a stable foundation for the market, while corporate bonds and sukuk offer higher yields for investors willing to take on additional credit risk.

Issuance activity has remained steady in 2025, with corporates continuing to raise funds through bonds and sukuk. Quarterly issuance levels have remained around RM45–50 billion, showing consistent demand from both issuers and investors. While highly rated issuers dominate the market, interest in higher-yield corporate instruments has increased as investors seek better returns in a stabilising interest-rate environment.

Higher yields are typically found in bonds and sukuk issued by mid-sized companies or project-based entities with predictable cash flows. These may include businesses in infrastructure services, logistics, renewable energy, property-related financing, and consumer industries. Such instruments usually pay higher coupons to compensate investors for higher credit risk compared to government or blue-chip issuers.

3.8 Government or GLC Projects Financing

It provides investors with exposure to large-scale, long-term developments that are typically supported by strong counterparties and stable revenue frameworks. These projects often involve essential infrastructure and public services, making them less sensitive to economic cycles and more predictable in terms of cash flow.

In Malaysia, government and GLC-led projects play a central role in national development. Key sectors include transportation, utilities, energy, water, telecommunications, healthcare infrastructure, and digital connectivity. Projects are commonly structured with long concession periods, regulated tariffs, or long-term offtake agreements, which enhance revenue visibility and reduce demand risk for investors.

As at 2025, Malaysia continues to commit significant public and quasi-public capital toward infrastructure and development initiatives. Under national development plans and sector-specific roadmaps, substantial funding has been allocated to transport networks, power grid upgrades, renewable energy integration, water treatment facilities, and digital infrastructure. These commitments create a steady pipeline of projects requiring financing through debt, sukuk, or structured investment vehicles.

GLCs such as Tenaga Nasional Berhad (TNB), Petroliaam Nasional Berhad (PETRONAS), Prasarana Malaysia Berhad, and Malaysia Airports Holdings Berhad are among the key sponsors of such projects. Due to their strong balance sheets, government backing, and strategic importance, financing extended to these entities is generally viewed as lower credit risk compared to purely private-sector projects.

Investors typically participate in government or GLC project financing through project bonds, sukuk, syndicated loans, or infrastructure funds. For example, power generation or grid upgrade projects may be financed through long-term sukuk with fixed coupon payments, while transport infrastructure projects may involve revenue-backed bonds supported by government guarantees or availability-based payment structures.

From an investment perspective, government and GLC project financing offers stable income, long-dated cash flows, and defensive characteristics. Returns are generally lower than high-risk private investments, but they are balanced by stronger credit quality, contractual revenue certainty, and alignment with national development priorities.

Overall, financing government and GLC projects in Malaysia provides investors with an opportunity to participate in nation-building initiatives while achieving predictable returns within a well-regulated and transparent framework. This makes such investments particularly suitable for investors seeking income stability, capital preservation, and long-term portfolio resilience.

Although persons involved in the management of the Fund have had long experience in their respective fields of specialization, the Fund has a limited operating or performing history upon which prospective investors can evaluate the Fund's likely performance.

4.3 Risk Management Strategies and Techniques

The Investment Manager seeks to mitigate the risks associated with the Fund by imposing stringent internal controls, compliance monitoring, and by virtue of its experience, skills and diligence in managing investment risks.

It is important to note that events affecting the investments cannot always be foreseen. Therefore, it is not always possible to protect investments against all risks. Please note that the returns of the Fund are not guaranteed.

The investments of the Fund carry risks and investors are recommended to read the whole Information Memorandum to assess the risks of the Fund.

Investors are reminded that the above list of risks may not be exhaustive and if necessary, they should consult their advisor(s), e.g. bankers, lawyers or independent professional advisors for a better understanding of the risks.

4.4 Specific Risks Related to the Fund's Investment Strategies

Credit and Default Risk

When providing financing or investing in companies with high capital needs, the Fund is exposed to the risk that counterparties may be unable to meet repayment or financial obligations. Defaults may arise from weak cash flows, poor financial management, or adverse economic conditions, potentially resulting in delays or losses in recovering capital and returns.

Business Execution Risk

The success of investments, particularly in start-up, high-growth, and expansion-stage companies, depends on effective execution of business plans. Risks include delays in project implementation, cost overruns, operational inefficiencies, or failure to achieve targeted growth and market penetration. Such factors may adversely affect profitability and investment outcomes.

Market and Valuation Risk

Investments in listed equities are subject to valuation uncertainty and market volatility. Adverse shifts in investor sentiment, regulatory changes, or economic conditions may affect exit valuations, cause listing delays, or result in significant fluctuations in portfolio value.

Liquidity and Exit Risk

Realisation of returns often relies on exit events such as IPOs, trade sales, or secondary placements. There is no assurance that such exits will occur within the expected timeframe or at anticipated valuations. Extended holding periods may reduce portfolio liquidity and delay distributions to Unit Holders.
